

Abstract

This invention relates to an improved underpad system to be used underneath many types of surface coverings, such as synthetic turf, carpet, coating, tiles, etc. The system consists of 5 three layers of material made from various components with different densities and thickness which provides a real absorption impact by a compression movement of the sandwiched layers.